Gold in Britain

In Great Britain a limit has been set on the amount of gold to be used for such products as spectacle frames. For this reason the gold content of gold-filled frames provided to the home market by the "free" national health service has been reduced, although frames with higher gold content are being exported to compete with superior standards in other countries. Another conservation move has been suggested — namely, to substitute nickel for gold-filled metal in certain parts of spectacle frames.

Uncle Sam Says

Andrew Jackson, our seventh President, said: "Save your money and thrive or pay the price in poverty and disgrace." Ten years ago millions of Americans started buying U. S. Defense Bonds. The money invested in that war is history, and it helped finance the owners in carrying out many needed projects. New Blood Test Found To Detect Diseases

Doctors in the near future may have a new blood test that will detect the presence of various diseases and also measure the effectiveness of different methods of medical treatment.

The basis for the new blood test, known as the "universal reaction," comes from 25 years of continuous effort by Dr. Reuben L. Kahn, developer of the "Kahn test" and chief of the serology laboratory at the University of Michigan.

The following is a simplified explanation of how Dr. Kahn's "universal reaction" works: 1) in a normal, healthy individual, there is daily tissue wear and tear resulting in the death of certain body tissue cells; 2) when the cells are thus destroyed, they break up and release their contents into body fluids, including the blood stream; 3) certain fat-like substances called "lipids" are part of the released cell contents; (4) some of these "lipids" become foreign to the body tissues and call forth the production of antibodies, present only to neutralize or destroy the lipids; and 5) presence of these antibodies is measured by the "universal reaction."

Being A Little Grimy Is Fun To Youngster

Bathing regularly may be a custom in the United States, but it's hard to make a little boy believe it. Children between the ages of three and twelve seem almost to prefer being a little grimy.

It helps if parents remember that the dislike of dirtiness is a taste that is developed slowly. The youngster should be given "fair warning" of the impending bath so that he will have time to finish what he is doing and get adjusted to the idea. Parents should "compromise on the umber of baths Junior is to take weekly, in order to enlist his cheerful co-operation. By the time they reach junior high school age, boys begin to take an interest in cleanliness and appearance, and are probably ready to accept daily bathing as a matter of course.

Fed by Agency

In one part of 1950's world, men's efforts had considerable success in rendering thousands of children homeless and orphaned. But in other areas, at least, other men were ministering to the youthful victims of past wars and civil wars on an unprecedented scale. To more than 2,400,000 children in Greece, Yugoslavia, and the Middle East, agents of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund last year doled out one good meal a day. Elsewhere they set up dairy machinery capable of supplying safe milk to 4,000,000 youngsters, vaccinated over 11,000,000 kids against tuberculosis, provided enough cotton, wool and leather to give 5,000,000 children an article of clothing or a pair of shoes—sometimes both.

New Insecticide

A new insecticide, heptachlor, looks so promising that more than a million pounds of it will be made before it is announced to the public. A close relative of chlordane, it has the advantage of being an effective insect killer outdoors, without remaining poisonous as long as chlordane. At a concentration of 1/10 pound of actual heptachlor per acre, grasshoppers were killed completely, while 4 ounces to the acre killed such tough pests as cotton boll weevil and thrips.

Paint—Then and Now

The forerunner of the modern living room was known in Colonial days as the "keeping room" or "sitting room." Its unfinished and painted walls, beamed ceiling and wide board floor—scrubbed while or painted—has set the style for many a living room today. The keeping room was sometimes the great kitchen, but generally it was the best room in the house, placed in front of the kitchen.

Hammurabi Had It

Although the average man today seems to regard inflation as a relatively current problem desiged deliberately for his personal harassment, research experts point out that the problem of inflation has been with us for almost four thousand years. In fact, it started way back in the days of King Hammurabi, literally the moment money was introduced as a common medium of exchange in the Babylonian marts of trade.

Way Back When

The Anglo-Saxons held the month of April sacred to Eostre, goddess of the teeming life that bloomed anew in the spring. Her great festival was celebrated by the exchange of (colored) eggs which were the heathen symbol for the beginning of life. With the advent of Christianity, the pagan custom evolved in England into the beautiful festival of Christian significance observed with the gladness of a new solemnity and called Easter.

Owls Have Talents

Owls have other talents beside their ability to see in the dark. They are as swift as swallows in flight, and as sensitive to sound as a radio receiving set.

Alcohol Kills Inhibitions And Influences Behavior

Drinking alcohol will usually break down inhibitions, but scientists would like to know more about the nature of that breakdown. They would like to know, for example, how completely behavior can be changed under the influence of alcohol.

Now John J. Conger, a psychologist, has attempted to answer a part of that question with intensive experiments on albino rats conducted at Yale University.

He has found that alcohol decreases and in some cases virtually eliminates fear. If alcohol is used to remove the fear-motivated restraints and to permit satisfaction of desires ordinarily repressed, the tendency to drink alcohol will usually increase, he says.

In his experiments, Mr. Conger first trained hungry rats to run down an alley to obtain food. Then a conflicting tendency was built up by giving the rats an electric shock as soon as they began to eat the food. After enough shocks had been received by the rats, the animals became extremely hesistant to approach the food despite their hunger. The animals were now ready for the alcohol test. It was found that the rats injected with alcohol ran up promptly and ate the food whereas rats injected with water would not approach the food.

Theory of Epicurus Found Valid Today

A theory dating back at least as far as the Greek philosopher Epicurus in 300 B.C. has cropped up to perplex today's scientists.

Is a reward or some sort of satisfaction necessary in order for a human or animal to learn things?

Epicurus philosophized that some sort of reward was necessary, and recent experiments with rats by Dr. Irving Maltzman of the University of California uphold his theory.

Dr. Maltzman, instructor in psychology, has subjected a group of rats to study in a "T" maze and demonstrated that when completely satisfied with food and water, the rats will not learn the location of more food and water.

"Of course, humans work much more efficiently when they like their work or there is some promise of reward," said Dr. Maltzman.

Migration of Birds

How do birds know when to migrate? This is a question that really cannot be answered. In spite of extensive study of many phases of bird migration no satisfactory explanation of any phase of it seems yet to have been made. Physiological changes, involving fat deposition and many other bodily activities, probably govern when they begin to migrate. Different factors undoubtedly are involved in initiating the fall and spring migrations. Migration is a very old activity, and is shown by many living creatures, besides birds.

Madame du Barry

Madame du Barry walked the forest paths around Marly as a favorite mistress of Louis XV. Marie Antoinette and ill-fated Louis XVI were the last to use the Marly castle. After the French Revolution, it was completely destroyed. All that remains today is a park with artificial lakes and weathered statuary. Most impressive among the latter is the colossal bronze group—"The Ocean and the Mediterranean"—executed by Guillaume Coustou.

Heifer Feeding

Stock heifers which have been wintered on five pounds of grain per head daily usually carry too much flesh in the spring to follow the ordinary methods of the Kansas deferred program. They should be fulfed during the summer rather than put on grass without grain. Experimental results on heifers full-fed during the summer have always favored feeding in the dryfot instead of feeding on pasture.

Farm Grinding

An arbor for light grinding for the farm shop can be easily made from the hub of the front wheel of an old bicycle. Secure the hub to a base with two steel straps. On one end of the axle mount a 1½ inch v. belt type pulley. On the other end of the axle secure a 4 inch emery wheel between two nuts. This small grinder can be operated by any ¼ horsepower electric motor and save many hours labor in sharpening tools.

Smooth As Silk

Missionary monks, who lived during the time of Justinian's reign are credited with having brought back to the West the knowledge of silkmaking that had been, up to that time, a Chinese mystery. They hid some silk-worm eggs in a hollow bamboo cane and smuggled them out of the land despite Chinese customs officials.

Mouse Eater

The cat isn't the only mortal enemy of the mouse. The hawk can detect a mouse from hundreds of feet in the air. Once sighted by the hawk, the rodent has little chance to survive, for this fierce, flesh-eating bird descends upon its prey with deadly speed and accuracy.

Winchester Apple Festival

Winchester, Va., April 25.- Florida's largest travel attraction will be hosted for the first time this year in miniature at Virginia's Winchester extravaganza, the 30th Annual Shennandoah Apple Blossom Festival here May 3 and 4. Winchester's Silver Springs will send its hand-drawn floats, each 4 by 8 feet in size, to participate in the gala, long grand parade which will highlight the second day of the festival.

The participation of Silver Springs in the apple blossom festival, a symbol of the continuous friendship between the two states, is the outgrowth of three years of sustained effort on the part of travel interests of Florida, headed by the Florida Attractions Association, and those of Virginia through the Virginia Travel Council. The object of Mr. Harnsberger's Committee is the promotion of the travel attractions and facilities of Florida in Virginia and among its 22 million annual visitors in return for similar consideration from the "Sunshine State." Silver Springs' fleet of floats will be viewed by 400,000 spectators from throughout the nation and foreign countries and the battery of press and newsreel photographers that will converge on Winchester for the parade, pageant, ball and coronation of Gari Lee, the daughter of Trygve Lie, Secretary General of the UN, as Her Majesty Queen Shenandoah XXIV.

Silver springs' presentation, noted for its appeal to children, will consist of five miniature floats "manned" by small children from three to seven years of age and drawn by ten boy scouts. One is a miniature glass bottomed boat, another a small Seminols Indian hut with a real Indian boy and girl, a third a miniature snake milking pit in which Ross Allen's seven year old boy stands surrounded by harmless though large snakes, t tiny jungle cruise speed-boats, and a Florida Promotion Committee of the miniature billboard reading "Don't leave Florida until you see Silver Springs."

SPRAY NOW TO CONTROL BLUE MOLD ON TOBACCO

Tobacco growers should be spraying now as a prevention against blue mold, says S. B. Fenne, plant pathologist at V. P. I.

Fenne says the first applications should be made when the plants are about the size of a dime; and should be repeated twice a week until the plants free of blue mold are assured for transplanting. Applications of spray or dust that are washed off by rain should be repeated as soon as weather will permit.

Perbam is the recommended control material.

Although the disease has not yet been reported in Virginia, Fenne says scattered, light infections have been reported in most of the eastern counties in North Carolina. The present outlook for North Carolina is good, and some transplantinfi already is underway.

Survey shows that opinion favors a federal sales tax.

CLUB MEMBERS OFFERED PHEASANT EGG SETTINGS

Virginia's 4-H Club members are being offered a chance this year to raise ring-necked pheasants.

W. A. Turner, associate 4-H agent at V. P. I., says a State of Washington game farmer, Samuel Martin, is offering settings of wild pheasant hatching eggs free to 4-H members throughout the nation. Only the cost of packing and mailing —20 cents—is required.

The settings, of 12 eggs each, started going out April 15, and will continue through June.

Club members who are interested are asked to contact county agents who will forward their requests to the state office at V. P. I.

Arrangements will be made to get pheasant breeding permits from the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries. This permit is issued free to individuals raising 50 birds or less annually.

PLOWING BACK $162,500,000

TO KEEP FAITH IN A VITAL PARTNERSHIP

Improvements on the Norfolk and Western Railway never stop . . . for better railroading and better railroad service is a job that is never finished.

Since the end of World War II, the N. & W. has spent and authorized $162,500,000 for improvements and additions all over the line . . . new equipment, heavier rails and smoother road beds, modern signals, a great tunnel and track relocations to cut down a ruling grade, a fine, new merchandise freight pier at the Port of Norfolk, expanded yards, new and more efficient engine terminal facilities, centralized traffic control, new tools, and scores of other additions and betterments.

The N. & W. is now in the midst of a $44,000,000 new equipment program, which includes the construction in its own shops of 19 more modern, powerful coal-burning steam locomotives; 15 more modern steam switch engines, 6,000 more sturdy 70-ton hopper coal cars, and the purchase of 1,000 more modern 50-ton box cars.

Throughout the years, the Norfolk and Western has followed a policy of continuously "plowing back" a large part of its income into its transportation plant for an ever-better railroad . . . preparing today for the traffic of tomorrow. And remember this: the railway buys, builds and maintains its own steel highway on which it pays large taxes . . . all with railroad dollars—not with taxpayers' dollars.

The Norfolk and Western believes that "plowing back" income to build a better railroad and provide better service is one of the soundest ways to express its faith in the vital partnership between the N. & W. and the communities it has served for nearly 113 years.

Norfolk and Western Railway
